

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A photodiode comprises an optical detection portion for detecting an optical signal and outputting a photoelectric conversion signal. The optical detection portion has a semiconductor substrate of a first conductive type and a plurality of semiconductor layers of a second conductive type formed in spaced-apart relation in a surface of the semiconductor substrate so that an etched surface portion of the semiconductor substrate is disposed between the semiconductor layers.